"Sept. 12 Too Remote"

London, Aug. 13. Mr Winston Churchill, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, today asked the Prime Minister, Mr Clement Attlee, to consider recalling Parliament "in a week or 10 days" instead of September 12, the date announced.

Mr Churchill, in a letter published today, suggested to Mr Attlee that the date September 12 was "altogether too remote and bears no relation to the crisis and the new facts which are before us."

Mr Attlee, who had announced the recall of Parliament to discuss defence matters, replied by letter suggesting that Mr Churchill should see him "to explain why you think that this is necessary."

THE swift American recovery from the A dangerous position created by the Communist lunges at Pohang-dong and across the main supply route between Pusan and Thegu does not mean that further surprises are beyond the bounds of possibility. The big test has still to come, the heavy massing of troops in the Taegu area is ominous, and while the magnificent resource of the Eighth Army commander and the dogged determination of the defence will make progress highly costly for the Korean armies, it is more than likely that more ground will have to be conceded before the initiative changes hands. The main reason for the spectacle of the United Nations forces being compelled to trade space for time is clear enough. Between them, General Mac-Arthur and President Truman have done a first-class job under severe handicaps. The greatest, of course, has been inability up to the present to match strength with strength in Korea. The overwhelming numerical superiority of the aggressors enables them to maintain ceaseless pressure and the extensive aid in personnel and equipment which they have received and are apparently still receiving from outside sources, meaning Soviet Russia and Communist China, is an incalculable factor. But there is at least a contributory reason, and this is that the American forces, who now bear the brunt of the battle, are lighting a strange war in a strange country, which adds to the usual, hazards and terrors of any war. For they are battling against a faceless enemy who is often invisible and sometimes indistinguishable from a friend-a foe who fights with a blend of Asiatic fatalism and Communist fanaticism and knows no respect for life, who observes no rules of war or humanity, who massacres the wounded and drives women and children in front of him to shield him from bullets. What is more, though American intelligence has identified at least seven Communist divisions and various other units, nothing is known about their communders, who remain nameless. What is known is that the titular head of the North Korean puppet regime and ostensible commander of the North Kerean armies is Kim Il Sung, a 38-year-old giant from South Nores. where he is wanted as a fugilive from justice. His real name is supposed to be Kim Sung Chu, but he has renamed himself after a legendary korean revolutionary hero whose exploits against the Japanese have made the name of Kim H Sung celebrated, and many Koreans apparently still believe that, it is their "original" here and not an imposter who rules in North Koren. But the real ruler of North Koren is almost certainly General T. F. Shtikov, a Soviet Army expert disguised as ambassador who was also the Soviet delegate to the Joint American-Soviet Commission on Korea, whose abortive attempts at unification he is now attempting to complete in a different manner. Furthermore, North Korean prisoners now confirm not only that the Soviets have provided both equipment and military "advisors" to the North Koreans but also that the nucleus of the North Korean armies is formed by Korean veterans of the Chinese Communist armies. Many of these stem from Korenn exiles or deportees settled in Manchurin or Asiatic Russia, and some of them have also received training in the Soviet armies. Finally, it is also clear that the North Korean armies, like the Russian, live on the land, which reduces their supply problems. It is this enemy which the United Nations faces, and it is these characteristics which make the task of beating him long and expensive.

London, Aug. 4. Will it ever be possible to describe Chinese painting without once using the word tranquil? I think not. No other single word quite captures the serenity of this work steeped in centuries of tradition. An exhibition of paintings by a young Chinese couple, Chen Chun-fu and Wu Yung-hainng, has opened in London this week. It includes also some recent paintings by Professor Chi Pei-shih, and Mr Pu Hsing-yu.

Rounding Off Youth Training

Thousands of youths who were moved from their homes, their parents, and their schools at the beginning of World War II, just vhen their education was tarting, are now reaching heir late teens.

Giving their education that brief but effective rounding-off which creates character rather than knowledge is one of the more difficult problems that inparticular, many European education authorities are having to tackle.

"Toughening-up" or "character training" courses ere increasingly providing the answer. Many of them in Britain are operated on the lines of the new Mountain School run by the Outward Bound Trust, a pioneer organisation through whose Sea School at Aberdovey, on the west coast of Wales, more than 6,000 boys and youths have passed since 1941.

In that year, Lawrence Holt, n Liverpool shipowner, and Kurt Hahn, a brilliant educationalist who had carried out important work in Britain before the war, founded the Trist's first school. Now has come Gatchouse, the Mountain School in Eskdale. one of the most beautiful valleys in the Lake District, in the northwest of England.

THINGS TO COME

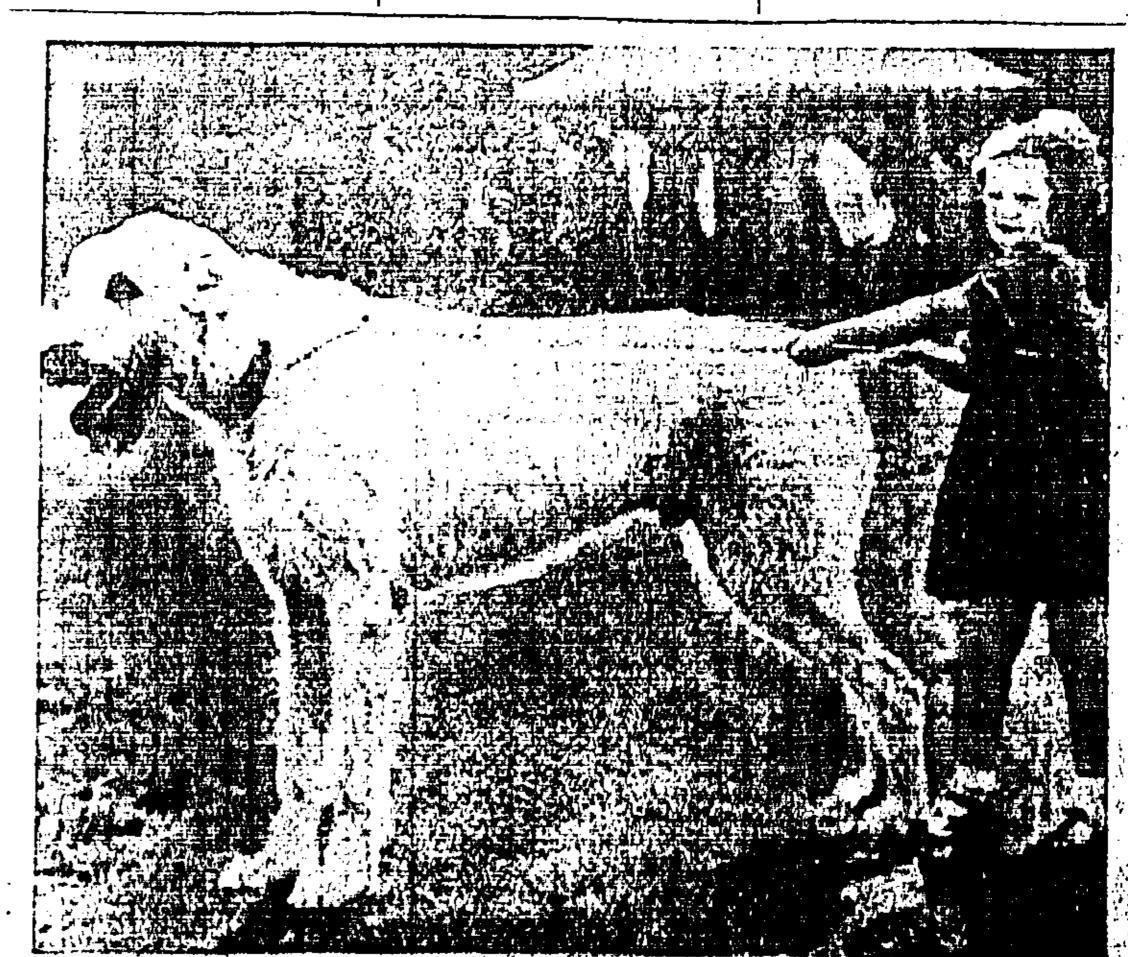

It is a pointer to things to come, for the Trust has a programme which calls for another Sea School, a second Mountain School and a Gliding School. The five schools between them will train a total of 5,000 every year, a programme which is expected to cost not less than £100,000.

To the new Mountain School slanding in large grounds near the Esk Estuary, came boys and youths between the ages of 15 and 1914-boys from great country houses and from small colliery cottages, from different types of schools, youngsters who will later be going to a universily and others who are about to start the job of earning their

Off The Track

This "abrent-minded" play threw South completely off the track. He decided that West not have the acc of spades. Therefore he got back to dummy with a club and led another trump. East again played low, and this time South put up the queen of spades, expecting to win the trick. Much to his disgust, however. West played the ace of spades. This made East's jack of spades high, and the contract was thus defeated.

If Lou had taken the first trump trick with his ace, South would have made his contract. He would have returned to dummy with a club or a heart. Then he would have led the ten of spades from dummy, finessing, through East's jack. The finesse would have succeeded, so South would have lost only one trump trick.

Lou, a very shrewd player. had seen the ten and nine of spades in the dummy. He had also deduced from the bidding that South had a four-card trump suit. His refusal to play the ace of trumps on the first round of that suit was therefore a very deliberate and very clever manocuvre. He read the entire trump situation and threw South off the track by refusing to win the first trump trick.

Debates Reveal Sharp Conflicts At Strasbourg

Strasbourg, Aug. 13. The first phase of this year's Council of Europe meeting ended with a wide-open conflict between its Assembly, struggling against its straitjacket, and the Committee of Ministers, determined to keep the Assembly under strict control.

The first week of heated debates brought to light also the unmistakable existence of an anti-union and anti-federation "bloc" composed chiefly of members from the Scandinavian countries and Britain.
